"I Would Like to Exchange

These two pins for something different from your stock, if I may, as I ordered these from the Coast and they do not please me."

So spoke a lady some time ago and seemed greatly surprised that we did not at once comply with her wishes.

Needless to say that we were as greatly surprised at such a request. Doesn't the above illustrate just what has occurred to you over and over again? How often have you been entirely satisfied with the article ordered from away? Probably not often.

Now that conditions are the same here there would seem no further excuse for sending abroad for those things which can be purchased as well at home.

We don't want all the business, only a share of it; but when dividing it, let the home people have it.

You have noticed the very large stock of holiday goods in every department. If there ever was a time when we could cater to your wants, that time is now.

Our stock contains everything needful and useful, and if you cannot come to make a personal selection, we will gladly send you a large selection package, and as many as wanted until your wants are satisfied.

FAIR WAS A SUCCESS

Cathedral Grounds a Scene of Gaiety.

LILUOKALANI WAS THERE

Busy Booths Besieged by Buyers—Young and Old Folks Attend Saturday.

LAST Saturday St. Andrew's Cathedral grounds presented a glowing scene of gaiety. Crowds of people, representing many nationalities, touched elbows in passing in and out of the Sunday school room, or the booths and lanai outside, where the refreshments were served.

As the day advanced, and throughout the evening, groups of the younger element promenaded from one place of interest to another, laughing, chatting and singing in a low undertone snatches of the native airs spiritedly played by the Hawaiian Quintet Club.

These young people were liberally bedecked with the fragrant malle lei and others of brilliant color and pungent odors, which scented the air as they passed to and fro.

The main event of the morning was the poi luncheon, served from 11 until 2 o'clock. The people plainly showed their preference for this native form of entertainment. The place was positively besieged by hungry, happy women and children, who soon made havoc of the beautifully arranged food, consisting of poi, raw fish and the native pudding and various other native delicacies.

The ice cream, cake and lemonade booths were also liberally patronized and one little chap declared delightedly, "I had almost everything to eat. First I had poi and fish, and then I had ice cream and lemonade, and then mamma let me have some pudding, and then I had some more ice cream and lemonade. Oh, I had a lovely time!"

The bicycle parade followed. There were, unfortunately, only three entries—one girl and two boys—to the great disappointment of many who had hoped for a beautiful display. The little girl took first prize for her flower-trimmed bicycle and each boy also was given a prize. The prettiest of the boys' bicycles was one draped in red. The other was pink and yellow. The effect as a whole was good. Had more entered, the evolutions would have presented a novel and pleasing exhibition and one not previously seen here in church fairs.

There was another innovation.

The introduction of the music of the hula.

Who was it—Rowland Hill? was it not?—who said he did not see why the devil should have all the pretty tunes?

And Honolulu has to thank his plain speech for the revolution which followed in new church music.

Queen Liliuokalani distributed the prizes to the great joy and delight of the spectators and the winners.

The booth presided over by Queen Liliuokalani was the center of attraction. Her personality drew a large and fashionable set about her, who promenaded and wheeled and turned but always seemed to be drawn back again to the booth where she sat or stood, enthroned in flowers.

The art needlework booth was another attractive lounging place where, nevertheless, brisk sales took place. Mrs. Kiteat, with her bevy of young and pretty girls, had charge of this booth.

The Hawaiian curios were in charge of Mrs. Ihihi and Mrs. Karratti. Many were rare and beautiful.

The doll booth, which occupied the center of the Sunday school room, was a beautiful sight; small dolls, medium sized dolls, wax, composition and china dolls vied with each other for popular favor. Some were expensively dressed throughout and brought big prices; others, simpler in style, fetched less, and a few sold as low as 50 and 75 cents, thus placing them within the reach of all.

The candy counter was another favored spot. The children hung about it and teased their mothers for the sweets. And in nine cases out of ten, persistency, as usual, won the day.

The grab box, in the care of the Misses Harris, was soon exhausted by the eager throng of children and had they had five times as much could easily have disposed of them before the closing of the fair. The children had a gala time here and soon the popping of the cap pistols and piping of the funny little whistles added to the music, the laughter, and the merry chatter gave unmistakable proof of the success of the entertainment.

The fancy table was littered with beautiful and desirable things from the woman's standpoint, and the "Humpty Dumpty" display was equally attractive from the child's.

But in the evening, when the grounds were a mass of quivering, changing light, when the soft breezes fanned and cooled one and the strains of sweet music soared heavenward above the spires of the holy and stately edifice; when the childish voices had ceased and only the "grown-ups" covered with leis, sauntered leisurely about the beautiful grounds and through the brilliantly lighted and draped house with many hued booths; then indeed it was a picture for the artist. Many carried homeward the memory of the scene to be cherished for years to come.

The officers and crew of the Iroquois assisted with the decorations and both artistically and financially St. Andrew's church fair was a decided success.

Students' Concert at Punahou.

CROWDS SAW WILCOX LEAVE FOR WASHINGTON ON RIO

TO THE TOOTING OF WHISTLES, the waving of hundreds of tear-stained handkerchiefs, the showering of an equal number of beautiful leis, the singing of sweet Hawaiian airs, the music of Berger's inimitable band, the cheering of a loud crowd of enthusiastic natives, and the waving of a few ill-mannered loungers on the wharf, Delegate-elect to Congress Robert Wilcox, his wife and family and his secretary and wife, departed from these shores for San Francisco on the steamship Rio de Janeiro early on Saturday morning.

A great crowd had assembled on the Pacific Mail wharf to see Wilcox and his following off to the Coast. Although the people were chiefly natives, there were nevertheless a large number of haoles present. Great enthusiasm prevailed and the scene was one that has not even been surpassed by the former demonstrations at the departure of the Australia for San Francisco.

Wilcox and his wife, after getting aboard the steamer, hastened to the bridge. From this position they were enabled to view the crowd and respond to the farewells of the people present. Wilcox bowed right and left, now and then waving his hand in token of recognition of some particular friend who had given him a parting sign. Mrs. Wilcox gracefully acknowledged the many salutations of the throng and occasionally had recourse to her pocket handkerchief as her feelings overcame her at the thought of parting from Hawaii nei and her people.

The other passengers aboard the Rio, although there were lots of their friends on hand to see them off, were entirely lost in the enthusiasm which prevailed at the going away of the Delegate-elect and his household.

When the steamer moved away from the wharf, the band was invited by Captain Brokaw to go aboard the tug Fearless, and as soon as it was aboard there followed a rush for the tug on the part of the crowd. Captain Brokaw made no objection and as many as could be accommodated were allowed to go out with the tug to say their last good-byes to Wilikoki.

The Fearless steamed alongside the Rio until she was way outside the mouth of the channel. The band on board played many entrancing Hawaiian tunes and the people on the tug sang together, their combined voices making melody most delightful to the ear. As is ever the case when the more moving of the native airs are rendered, many a silent tear stole down the cheeks of those whose hearts were touched by the beauty and subtle pathos of the music of the human voice and the instruments which accompanied it.

As the tug dropped behind the steamer outside the harbor and made ready to return to land its passengers, "Hawaii Ponoi" was played and sung, the Rio and the Fearless exchanged parting salutes with their whistles, three rousing cheers were given for Wilcox, and the Delegate-elect and his family were off for Washington via the Golden Gate.
